BETHEL COLLEGE.

Commencement Exercises Concluded To-morrow Night.

Four Young Ladies Will Graduate
--Elocutionary Contest
To-night.

This is Commencement week of Bethel College. The young ladies' reception was held last Friday night and was largely attended. Refreshments were served in the music hall.

Last night the pupils' final recital was given in the chapel and a large crowd attended. The program was very interesting and included an elocutionary contest.

A meeting of the College Alumnae will take place this morning and to-night at the Baptist church the Baccalaureate sermon will be preached by Rev. J. N. Prestridge, of Louisville.

The final exercises will take place to-morrow night in the college chapel and diplomas will be awarded to four young ladies. They are Miss Miriam Eades, Greenview, Ky.; Judith Sugg, Providence, Ky.; Elizabeth Garnett, this county; and Jessie Bowman, this city.

The young ladies will depart for their homes on Thursday.

The session has been a very successful one. The class of 1902 will be a large one. Most of the juniors expect to return and graduate next year.

The closing exercises of the Public Schools and of South Kentucky College will come off next week.

Miss Minnie Armistead left yesterday for Memphis, to visit Mrs. J. N. Thomas.

AT LAST.

No pen will paint the grandeur of the sleep which He giveth at last. When the sun is gone, the yearning, when the slumber of silence cometh with the quieting endearment of the heart of an ever-revered.

No brushes portray the silence that no sound can break. Till the first sound comes with its gladdening cry: "Awake!" No sound makes the eyelids quiver, nor the dawn of that blissful morning, the brightest of all the best.

No tongue may speak the quiet nor tell the number of the hours.

The number that knows no waking, despair of the artist's brush.

When the toll of day is past, we are like a child entombed, rest we, in the arms of sleep.

—Helen Hart Woodworth, in Springfield (Mass.) Republican

THE MAGIC CASKET.

By PAUL P. HARRIS.

His card, in type perfectly legible from across the street, read: "Ignatius Roper, Constable." In smaller letters, down in the left corner, was the one word more than any other calculated to set criminal hearts palpitating—"Detective." Ignatius was not a detective, but he was willing to be.

He was angular as a rail fence, but not pretty; good, when asleep, but that was seldom. His expression, when he had any, was "devil may care," and it belied him not, for his infernal majesty did care. Ignatius didn't, and to give the devil his due, he probably didn't care either, for to him "Ig" was a cinch. He only waited the trumpet sound to gather him unto his fold.

Ignatius could serve a summons which would entail despair with the quickness of a madman's pouncing. May flowers; or, when occasion required, levy execution on man's last assets, household chattels, with the calm sweet look about the eyes characteristic of a game cock in action. He fitly reconciled to the theory that the punishment should fit the crime, but earned not a whit if the measure of punishment slopped over; in fact, to him it was infinitely preferable that one real culprit escape, and no man was innocent until he proved it. "Service" of placed in "Ig's" Service, ergo conclusion. His hands were a sufficient for him to covet no wife, and an occasional his daily bread and throat, but moistening of his parched lips. The occasions came often. Armed with a writ, he was formidable as a gauntlet gun; uncompromising as a mother-in-law bent on spending the winter. His professional sobriquet was "Old Remorseless," to the laity, he was simply "Hades."

Ignatius was sitting at his desk one winter's afternoon, ruminating on the past, planning for the future. Business had certainly been dull—not a penny turned during the week.

The justice clerk came in.

"Three attachments; one for you, Roper; one for Brady and one for Levi; all against Mlle. Demorest, doing a sketch called the 'Magic Casket' at Howard's. She keeps her wardrobe in a huge casket, the same one that has the title role in the sketch. Look out for that casket. You'll have to levy on the wardrobe probably; very little show at the box office. She's been playing in hard luck. The management is against her. I reckon they're back of the prosecution, but that's no business of ours. She expects to leave Cincinnati tonight, but I see her finish. Ten dollars on the side for each successful levy. I told the plaintiffs that you three are the whole thing; now if you win, make good to me. Of course, I know that this is Friday and the 13th, and that a black cat crossed the alley to-day, but bad omens don't go. See?"

Ignatius, ever prompt, was on hand earlier than usual that evening. There were two constables to be outdone. A clever ruse gained him admission to the stage entrance.

"Mlle. Demorest's room?" he asked, very much as though he were very well acquainted.

"The first to the right."

Ignatius rapped. A fat, dumpy woman appeared.

"Yes, she is in. Oh, mademoiselle, a call."

Ignatius served his writ and mademoiselle bowed her head demurely, but said not a word though Ignatius could see that she was struggling to keep back the tears.

"I am sure I don't know what you'll find of value. My costumes, such as I have, are in the casket, but I trust

The McCormick and you will take them. I hope I shall be able to satisfy you as soon as we can hear from the box office. Take a seat and a glass of wine. I have a very little maid who's said to be quite good."

Ignatius stared at mademoiselle. He piqued himself on being a very good judge of human nature. He thought her certainly pretty. He rather liked the eyes, though he would wager that they could snap fire, and he pledged himself to give them every opportunity at his command to do so; but there was no hurry.

"Well, I don't mind taking a sip of your wine. I have no doubt that it is good."

She told him her story and, as a matter of amusement, he permitted her to continue, but when the messenger returned from the box office to state that no relief could be expected from that source, he arose, grinning broadly and said: "Business is business, ma'am."

He took out a costly gown. There was no word of protest, though she no longer endeavored to restrain her tears. Ignatius almost laughed aloud.

"I'm getting next, the flood gates are raised. Perhaps she will accommodate me with an oath or two. Most actresses are that considerate."

He threw the rich costume in a heap. It was an anticlimax moment when he saw that there was ample value to satisfy every claim. Last of all he found a little dainty gown, torn and faded. It was not half large enough even for mademoiselle. Ignatius was about to throw it aside as unworthy his attention when he felt the sharp prick of a pin and, looking again, he saw a brooch of antique design.

"Wait a minute," he muttered to himself. "There may be some value to this."

He unclasped the pin and rubbed the face of the medallion on his knees. "Yes, this is worth having, if only to keep it as a memento of the occasion. Mother, grandmother or sweetheart, perhaps." He held the brooch before the electric light.

"This is a lark. If there's anything I do on attaching, it is something that's sacred to memories of times gone by. Heirlooms were always my stronghold. Take, for instance, the time that old Simpson's widow—Simpson's widow—Simpson's what's that? Mammy Dale! Mammy Dale's likeness, and on this actress' traps!"

The constable and would-be detective stood abashed.

"It's a desperation, by Jupiter. Thank God her soul is at rest."

Then Ignatius' thoughts wandered far back beyond the turbulent years of childhood days in the Indiana home, the home which he, when little more than a child, had left in search of what he then conceived to be adventure—what he now realized had been trouble. He had been so buffeted about by adversity that he had been ashamed to return home or to communicate with them in any way. He had heard of mammy's death, and she had been as much a mother to him—who was by birthright a waif and by predilection a scapemate—as she had been to her own baby, Kate.

Mademoiselle, turning, saw the gown and snatched it from the officer's hand.

"Oh, sir, you cannot care for that. There's no value, and, please, sir, give me the brooch. Take the rest; take everything. Oh, the law, the law; is there nothing that the law holds sacred, and have you never had a mother, sir?"

"Mother, mother; what has that to do with this?"

"Only that if you have, you'll take that likeness; it's of my mother's face, sir."

He looked again into her eyes. "No doubt, no doubt." His lips almost gave utterance to the word: "Kate."

"Well, mademoiselle, I guess perhaps the law will forgive me this time. There may be two sides to the question. You see an attachment under our statute is a bit arbitrary anyhow. The defendant has no chance to plead until perhaps it's too late. It's designed to keep fraudulent debtors from getting beyond the jurisdiction of our courts, but somehow, I don't feel that you intend to defraud me to—no, nor shall I permit anyone else to take away your last chance, little one. There are two other letters planned for to-night, but they'll not be mailed till after the box office closes. Let me see, let me see, how shall we fix them? They will be after the casket, and they'll expect to find it loaded. Yes, I think I see my way clear."

History records no more remarkable instance of a trial than this the ater on the 13th day of February. Failing to satisfy their visits at the box office, Brady and Levi swooped down upon mademoiselle's dressing-room. The casket was there, though locked. It seemed to weigh a half-ton. It surely was a find. Brady winked at Levi and whispered: "This is easy." They tried to satisfy their curiosity by peering through some anger holes in the end, but their efforts were unavailing. Brady secured a screw-driver and began the attack. It certainly was weird business, nevertheless, this casket opening. They had but half completed their task when the stage bell tolled dolefully, and Brady, turning to Levi as the last stroke died away, asked: "How many?"

Levi answered: "Thirteen."

At that moment a black cat, which they had not noticed before, sprang from a chair in an obscure corner, stretched itself, looked sadly at Brady and passed out.

Levi noticed that the perspiration was beaded on Brady's brow and he acknowledged to himself that he, too, felt a little creepy. The lights, except the one that they worked by, were all out, and the theater was deserted, but the reward would be a good one and well worth taking despite chances for. The lid was finally raised. Brady saw something never to be forgotten. There, peacefully laid out, with his arms folded across his breast, was Ignatius. Brady raised his hands in holy terror, uttered a wild shriek, turned about and fled. Levi was only too willing to quit without looking, and he made a quick second.

When the coast was clear, Levi sat erect and rubbed his eyes.

"Well, that certainly was a hot shot. I reckoned that it would do the business. Nothing so appealing as a corpse to some pusses."—Radford Review.

FAST FOREIGN TRAINS.

Long Runs Made in France and England Without Stops.

Recent improvements in the speed of express trains in England, Scotland and France form the subject of an article by Mr. Rous-Marten in the Engineer. In 1899 Mr. Rous-Marten found numerous improvements to report, but in 1900 there were not many, and a considerable portion of the present article is devoted to refutations of erroneous statements which have been made by other writers. France still shows faster schedules than England. The French did not make much improvement in 1900 over 1899, but the very natural explanation is that the 1899 record was remarkably high. In France, speeds on the different lines are limited by statute, the highest limit being 74.4 miles an hour. On some parts of the Paris, Lyons & Mediterranean the limit is 63.3, and on other sections of this and other roads the limits are 62.1 and 55.9.

There are eight stretches of railroad in France, of over 100 miles each, which are traversed regularly by trains which make no stops. The longest of these is from Paris to Arles, on the Northern, 120 miles, at 53.3 miles an hour. Most of these eight lines more than one non-stop journey is made daily. Between Paris and Troyes, 103.75 miles, there are six such trips daily, the fastest being made at 49 miles an hour. This is on the Eastern railroad.

In England there are so many long runs without a stop that the author tabulates only those of 120 miles or longer. The longest is from Paddington (London) to Exeter, over the Great Western, 193.2 miles; quickest time, 3 hours 43 minutes, rate 52.1 miles an hour. Between Crewe and Carlisle, over the Northwestern, 141.8 miles, ten trips are made daily, each without a stop, the fastest being at the rate of 51.6 miles an hour. The total number of runs without stops shown in this table of routes is 56.

Mr. Rous-Marten gives tables showing the fastest run on each of the principal British roads and a similar table for the French; and also shows all of the runs in each country scheduled at 54 miles an hour or faster. Of these he finds in England 17, and in France 36.

The best of the British list is from Forfar to Perth, on the Caledonian, 324 miles, as 33 minutes (58 miles an hour). The best French run is on the Midi between Morceux and Bordeaux Controle, 87.2 miles in 66 minutes (61.6 miles an hour). On the Northern from Paris to Amiens, 81.2 miles, one train is run in 81 minutes (60.5 miles an hour).

JUROR AND WITNESS.

Justice Brewer Thinks They Have Some Rights Which Trial Lawyers Should Respect.

Justice David G. Brewer, of the United States supreme court, arraigned the jury and witness systems of the United States in a recent lecture on "Responsibility of Citizenship" before Yale students. He said:

"It is one of the duties of American citizenship that we are called to serve on juries. How often the state of sickness of the jury call reveals! Men do not like to serve as jurors, and I don't blame them. The jury system as it is at present administered is little more than a relic of a semi-barbaric age.

"The juror is treated little better than a criminal. He is locked up at night and is given little more pay than a day laborer. He is compelled to listen to the wrangle of lawyers. I hope that the time will come when the juror will be treated like a gentleman and when he will receive the pay of a gentleman. I also hope that the jury system of conviction will give way in which the concurrence of a reasonable number of jurors shall determine the verdict.

"It is one of the duties of American citizenship to perform the duty of a witness when summoned to a court, although under the present system the witness is treated like a liar and is browbeaten by opposing lawyers. But the juror and the witness should strive for their own elevation, and should perform their duty of citizenship in these respects when called to do so."

"It has been said that prohibitory laws are the most certain incentives of perjury known. Both witnesses and jurors are parleying with conscience, and their attitudes spring from objection to the law. It is also known that some of them may be unwise. I don't mean to say that sometimes the people may be made good by statutes or ordinances, but I do wish to say that when a city passes an ordinance it is the duty of its residents to uphold it.

—TUESDAY, MAY 28, 1901—

The "blackberry winter" business is in danger of being overdone. We have had it now for nearly a month.

Gaetano Bresci, the assassin of the late King Humbert of Italy, committed suicide in his cell one day last week, by hanging.

Alvin C. Atkins, Secretary of the Paducah Elks' Lodge is short $1, 100 and has been removed from office. The Lodge will not prosecute.

The Paducah Democrat, the Elizabethtown News and other State papers are beginning to manifest impatience at the delay in sending a requisition to Indiana for the return of Taylor and Finley.

The Court of Appeals, in a case from Barren county, has decided that the long and short haul clause in the constitutional does not apply to railroads unless the short haul is included in the long one.

The State authorities have made no attempt so far to investigate the charge of recentered of nearly a month ago questioning the morale of the Western Asylum. Perhaps after all, it is just as well to pass it up to the grand jury, which meets next Monday.

Gen. Fitz John Porter, who died last week, was dismissed from the U. S. Army for cowardice in failing to take part in the battle of Bull Run. Years after the war was over a commission appointed by the President relieved him of the charge and Congress affirmed the decision after a long debate.

The articles on "Russia of To-day," by Henry Norman, which have been a feature of Scribner's Magazine (but have been interrupted for several numbers), are resumed in the June number with a paper on "Finland," which is just now the centre of interest on account of the efforts of the Russian Government to surpass the Finnish language in official business.

Mr. Norman writes very sympathetically of this hardy people who have so long maintained their individuality while a part of the Russian Empire. He gives remarkable instances of their energy and integrity, and shows the pathos of their attempt to keep their identity against heavy odds.

Can be completely and permanently removed, no matter how young or old the sufferer.

Hood's Saraparilla was given the daughter of Silas Vernon, Waukesha, N. Y., who had broken out with scrofula sores all over her face and head. The first bottle helped her and when she had taken six the sores had disappeared and she was stronger. She writes that she has never shown any signs of the scrofula returning.

The Century for June is a College Number, the opening paper, by Miss Alice Fallows, being an exposition of the delights and difficulties of "Working One's Way Through College," and the two closing "body" articles being devoted to a consideration of Alleged Luxury Among College Students," the writers President Hadley of Yale and Provost Harrison of the University of Pennsylvania—agreement that there is little to excite alarm in present conditions at least in the institutions over which they respectively preside. In this number is printed the prize essay in the Century college competition of 1900—Tolstoi's Moral Theory of Art," by John Albert Macy of Harvard;

Dr. Alexander Dowie, a fair-weather doctor and proprietor of the Zion establishment at Chicago, is under arrest charged with criminal negligence because one of his patients died to death when a physician might have saved her life. The woman's husband was present and sanctioned the prayer treatment that failed.

Biliousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is distended, the liver enlarged, the bowels constipated. There is a loathing of food, pains in the bowels, dizziness, coated tongue and vomiting, first of the undigested or partly digested food and then of bile. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tonic is a safe and effective remedy for the stomach and a cathartic for the liver to a healthy action and regulates the bowels. Try them and you are certain to be pleased with the result. For sale by all druggists.

THREE PERSONS DROWNED.

Sad Result of Storm Which Visited Elkton.

Elkton, Ky., May 25.—The severest rainstorm of years visited this section last evening, doing great damage to crops, fences, stock, telephone wires and even trees. The rainfall was accompanied by thunderstorm, lightning and wind, the wind felling a number of trees.

The saddest result of the storm in the county was the drowning of three persons residing near this city.

About 2 o'clock Mrs. R. A. Morrow, her little 7-year-old daughter and Miss Janie Craig started from their home near Allegree, nine miles north of this city, to come to Elkton in a buggy. The storm overtook them, but they continued their journey until they came to a small branch—Dodd's Creek. This they attempted to cross while the stream was in a raging state. The buggy capsized and all three were drowned. The bodies have been found; they had drifted some distance from the ford.

Mrs. Morrow's husband and also her brother are now in Texas and have been notified by telegraph. The bodies are to-day being embalmed in the hope of preserving them for several days until relatives can reach here from the West.

Latter Details.

Mr. F. M. Dulin was in the city yesterday and brought some of the details of the accident. Mrs. Morrow was formerly Miss Mattie Kirkman. Her husband is now in Texas. Miss Craig lived with her. The sudden freshet it is supposed was caused by the giving away of the watergap above the road letting loose a large volume of water at once, as they had passed the deepest part of the creek. The water subsided in half an hour and P. B. Robinson discovered and recovered the bodies. Mrs. Morrow was found in the bed of the creek. Miss Craig was left on the bank by the falling waters a little below. The child's body was carried a mile and left on the bank. The mare they were driving kept her nose above the water and escaped alive with a piece of the buggy hanging to her.

The three bodies were buried at the Kirkman graveyard the next day. Mrs. Morrow's hand bag containing the key to her house was lost and the house had to be broken open when the dead bodies were taken home.

TYPHOID FEVER

Causes Death of Well Known Young Coledonia Farmer.

Another son of Mr. Wallis' is dangerously ill of the same disease.

MCARROLL'S DECISION.

Court Refused to Allow Any Part of Claim.

The suit of John Boyd, ex-Sheriff of Lyon County, against S. N. Leonard, in which suit the said Boyd claimed a full partnership in the profits made in the purchase of Lyon county bonds held by Dr. E. R. Cook and Mr. C. A. Thompson, of this city, the profits amounting to over $13,000, was decided by special Judge Joe McCarroll, of this place, in favor of John Boyd. Prior to the sale of said bonds several years ago Dr. Cook had been involved in litigation to recover on them, but owing the feeling in that county, could never enforce the judgment of the court. He was represented by Messrs. Husband & Husband, of Paducah, in the litigation and in the above suit between Boyd and Leonard they came into said action by cross petition, claiming a fee of $1000 against Dr. Cook.

This branch of the case was hotly contested and finally decided in favor of Dr. Cook, the court refusing to allow any part of the said husband & husband's claim. Dr. Cook was represented by Mr. J. B. Allenworth, of this city.

RIPE IN YEARS.

Esq. B. S. Campbell Passed Away Saturday.

One of the County's Oldest and Best Citizens—Ninety Years Old.

Mr. Benjamin S. Campbell, one of the oldest citizens of Christian county, died at 2:30 a.m. Saturday, after a long illness.

Mr. Campbell was born in Christian county, September 15, 1810, and was reared on a farm near Beverly.

Upon reaching manhood he came to Hopkinsville and went into the drygoods business where the First National Bank now stands.

In 1850 he bought the farm where he died, on the Canton pike. His wife died four years ago. Three children survive, Capt. Ned Campbell, of Henderson; Mrs. Milton Gant, of Owensboro, and Mrs. Jas. C. Moore, of this county.

Mr. Campbell was a good business man and accumulated a comfortable estate. He was one of the original organizers of the Hopkinsville Christian Church and was an officer in the church for sixty years. He was also a trustee of South Kentucky College and a director in the First National Bank.

His long life was characterized by earnest piety and consistent Christianity. He brought his religion into his daily life and was noted for his generosity, his goodness of heart and his benevolence. His funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the Christian church, and his grandsons acted as pall-bearers. Rev. H. D. Smith preached an appropriate discourse and the burial occurred in Hopewell Cemetery.

Sues Elks Lodge.

Fannie Morton vs. The Hopkinsville Elks Lodge is the style of a suit filed in the Circuit Court last Friday. Plaintiff alleges that by the closing of Mercer Park for the purpose of holding the Elks Fair she was deprived of the use of same, which was rented for a pasture, and that she was thereby damaged in the sum of at least $500.

A Cup of Good Coffee

To get a really good cup of coffee you'll have to start back of the actual making; you'll have to look to the roasting and the grinding. In ARBUCKLES' you have a coffee that's scientifically roasted, and delivered to you with all the pores of the berry hermetically sealed. You're sure of a good cup of coffee because all the coffee flavor and aroma are kept intact until you want it. The name of ARBUCKLES' induced other coffee packers to put out imitations of it. These imitations cost the grocer (and you) a cent a pound less than ARBUCKLES'. But don't be tempted to buy a package of some other coffee when you can get for it is actually less expensive than the cheap kind; goes further—besides being better flavored, more satisfying.

You will find a list of useful articles in each package of Arbuckles' Coffee. A delicate part of one of these articles becomes part of the coffee when you buy the coffee. The one you select from the list will be sent to you on condition that you send to our Moline, Ill., Dept. a certain number of signatures cut from the wrappers.

A VERY INTELLIGENT DOG.

Not Only a Trick-Performer, But He Understands What You Say.

The most known and knowing dog in California is Charles Newman's Golden Lion, a St. Bernard, six years old, 37 inches in height and weighing 167 pounds. He has a record of jumping over a bar five feet three inches from the ground; can carry 40 pounds in a basket with his teeth, and understands English as well as the average child of five or six years of age.

Lion has traveled extensively, his education having been completed by a trip to Europe, where he took a gold medal prize over all exhibited St. Bernards of the rough-coat class at the London dog show. He has taken St. Bernard prizes all over the eastern cities and has also a silver medal which he won at the Mechanics' fair, with a whole troupe of performing barkers from the Orpheum matched against him. Although the prize was given for performing tricks, the truth is that there is no mere trick about it, for with Lion it is really a knowledge of English language for which he should be commended. The actor dogs could only do their learned-by-heart performance. Lion did anything requested by any spectator which it was possible for a dog to do.

He will take off a gentleman's hat or overcoat, carry a message or package to any place that he knows by name, even at a mile's distance, and in the same way take any object of which he knows the name or from any place designated. He will pick up money thrown upon the smooth marble-tiled floor, go up and lay it on the bar, and then bark to be served. But whatever others may take, he has good sense in his drinking. They may have their cocktails, punches and other stimulants, but for him he leaves the festive crowd, and going quietly around to the end of the bar, has pure, cold water served to him in a panikin.

The rescuing instinct is so strong with this intelligent dog that he will not allow his master to go too far out in the breakers when swimming from the beach at Sutro's, but as soon as he thinks the danger line has been reached, he swims directly in front of Mr. Newman and barks him back to shore.—San Francisco Call.

THE SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN.

How It Works in Utah—Half the Women on Vote.

The Utah State Council of Women has just completed an interesting investigation concerning the extent to which the women of Utah exercise the right of suffrage. It has been alleged by antisuffragists that women do not avail themselves of the right to vote even when it is extended to them, and the National Federation requested the Utah council to report whether this was true as to Utah. At the meeting of the council the other day it was announced that the investigation showed that but about 50 per cent. of the Utah women go to the polls. The report will be forwarded to the National Federation.—Utah Herald

OYSTER LORE.

Various Sayings and Stories Concerning the Delicious Morsel.

"He was a bold man that first ate an oyster," exclaimed Swift; but if the oyster himself were called upon for an opinion he would doubtless quote from a greater than Swift, and bethink him of his own ambition which left him "naked to his enemies." The iron chancellor's first introduction to the very gentle heart of a good conscience he first described to a German editor, who wrote it down for posterity. Four men once sat around Bismarck's dinner table, a half-dozen oysters at each plate. The host inquired how many oysters had been sent, and on being told 100, ordered them all brought in.

"In Adam's place, we should not have been tempted by apples," Bismarck once said; "it would have had to be oysters at the very least." The iron chancellor's first introduction to the very gentle heart of a good conscience he first described to a German editor, who wrote it down for posterity. Four men once sat around Bismarck's dinner table, a half-dozen oysters at each plate. The host inquired how many oysters had been sent, and on being told 100, ordered them all brought in.

"The largest number I ever ate at one time," he continued, "was 175 when I was 26 years old. Returning from England, I saw some advertised at a restaurant, and called for 25. Finding them excellent, I asked for 20 more. While at it, I determined to eat nothing else, and ordered an additional 100, greatly to the amusement of those present."

Thackeray's first venture with American oysters is well known to repeat. Does anyone say no? Well, then, having a plate of enormous oysters before him, he rejected the largest because it "resembled the high priest's servant's car that Peter cut off." After swallowing one of slightly more moderate size, he said that he felt "as if I had swallowed a raw baby."

Dickens playfully attributed a touch of rheumatism to indulgence in American oysters. "Their feet are always wet," he wrote to a friend, "and so much damp company in a man's insides cannot contribute to his peace."

Mrs. Inchbald, the charming actress whose very stammer was said to be captivating, had long been besieged by her friends to taste an oyster. "Oh, no, indeed," Fanny Kemble records hearing her cry, "I—I never could! What? E-e-eat the eyes and i-t-the nose, the teeth a-and the toes, the a-a-all of the creature!" Nor could her prejudice ever be overcome.

It was Mrs. Inchbald's determination, undaunted even by the impediment in her speech, which made her one of the most successful and beloved women of the eighteenth century. She had backbone, a contemporary said of her, "backbone which knew when to bend to occasion," a characteristic admired through all the centuries. And yet, "to return to our sheep"—there are living things without spinal columns, fortunately "else we should have to take bones out of our oysters!"—Yuletide's Con-

The Awful "Black Friday."

As a result of the present fever on Wall street, Russell Sage declares that there will be another "Black Friday." The question may be asked by many readers of the Democrat, what was "Black Friday?"

It was a serious and far-reaching panic which commenced on Friday, September 24, 1869, and came as a result of an unwarranted speculation in inflated stocks, and at a time when the country was in a hitherto unknown condition of prosperity. It was the bursting of a bubble. The explosion of superficial and artificial values in the markets.

The crash came at high noon after a siege of excitement on Wall street. It was the result of a conspiracy to inflate the price of gold and for a time it looked as if it would succeed. The gold room was the attraction for the crowds, and for blocks the throng surged and jostled in the vicinity. Business became paralyzed as the news was flashed over the wires. The day previous gold had closed at 143½. By stages it was forced up to 165 and the end soon came. The fluctuation in the prices was rapid as it was sudden, but they always showed the upward tendency as the waves at flood tide. When 160 was reached the great crowds went wild, as closely resembled a miniature stock pen. While some men were becoming delirious with a wild joy, others were growing maddened with despair. Just as the fever had reached the limit and gold was at the highest figures, the clock in old Trinity Church chimed the hour of high noon.

It was through the prompt action of President Grant that the diabolical conspiracy was checked before it could do further mischief. The two men mostly responsible for "Black Friday" were Jay Gould and James Fisk. They had cornered the gold, and in order to carry out their purpose, Fisk telegraphed to the President asking him not to sell any more gold under any circumstances. Grant received the letter and divining its mysterious significance, he immediately saddled a horse and riding to the nearest telegraph station, he wired. Secretary Boutwell to sell $5,000,000 worth of gold at once. The news of the President's action had reached the gold room in the Exchange before the chimes of the clock had fairly died out, and gold immediately fell to 138, or 5½ points lower than the previous day lower than the previous day.

In a minute every wire was pressed into service and the news was flashed all over the country. Those who had mounted the imminence of victory one minute before, were now vanquished and became silent in their defeat, immense failures followed, and the backbone of the combination was broken. Gould and his partner, Fisk, had to be guarded by Deputy Sheriffs and made their escape through a back passage into Wall street, where they secured a hiding place in the office of a friend to avoid threatened lynching. No avalanche ever swept a country with more terrific violence than did the message of President Grant to Secretary Boutwell.

In a minute every wire was pressed into service and the news was flashed all over the country. Those

HOTEL ARCADIA.

Everything in "Apple Pie" Order For Season 1901.

In this issue of the KENTUCKIAN we present to our readers the advertisement of the Arcadia Hotel, Dawson Springs, Ky., and the attention of the public is called to same.

The Hotel Arcadia, which is one of the most popular hosteries in Western Kentucky, has been repainted, papered and refurnished throughout and guests who visit the place this season will find everything in "apple pie order." Nothing has been overlooked in providing for the comfort and pleasure of guests and it is safe to say that the management will, on the occasion of the season of 1901, maintain the high order of excellence attained years ago.

A Pathetic Picture of the Abandoned Farm.

There is a deep pathos in the picture by W. L. Taylor, called "The Passing of the Farm," which appears in the June issue of the Ladies' Home Journal. The bowed and sad-faced figure of the lonely widow standing with one hand on the open door of the waiting coach while she takes a long last look at her home, makes a strong appeal to the feelings. The sad November sky, the distant misty hill, the closed house, the deserted barns, and above all, the dejected figure, bringing a lump into one's throat.

How Girls Pass Their Lives in France.

The famous French author and editor, Mme. Blanc, whose queer pen-name is "Th. Benton," has written a complete and exhaustive account of a "A Girl's Life in France," which will soon be published in the Ladies' Home Journal. She emphasizes early baptism, careful religious and school instruction, implicit obedience, simplicity in dress and short engagements as among the chief features of the lives of the French girls.

Three Children Meet a Terrible Fate in West Virginia.

Job, W. Va., May 22.—Three children of E. Porterfield, a mountaineer, were killed and partially eaten yesterday by bears. The mangled remains were found, and a party of men turned out to hunt the animals. One of them was killed while returning to the place where the children had been killed.

The Hopkins County Cases.

Madisonville, Ky., May 22.—In the case of the union mine workers killed by deputy sheriffs no jury has yet been obtained. Five deputy sheriffs are indicted. A number of able lawyers appear for prosecution and defense and the case will hard fought from beginning to end.

Remarkable Women Photographers.

Much interest in women's work in photography has been aroused by the series of picture pages now appearing in the Ladies' Home Journal. But no one of them is likely to attract more interest and admiration than that in a forthcoming issue which will be devoted to five exquisitely pictorial reproductions of quaint village life by Francis and Mary Allen. Their pictures recall the wonderful charm the simplicity and stateliness of by-gone days.

THE RIVER.

Softly the breath of morning steals faint across the sky. Silently back to command the chilling vapor he comes. And in the gloom of darkness another day is won. While carries of the wonder, the river flows on.

The day mounts high and higher, the heat and melt to brass; Along the glaring highway the weary people pass. Faintly in their ceaseless toiling and drooping 'neath the sun, unconscious that the river still tirelessly flows on.

The sky grows back to golden the branches into gray; With purple shadows creeping across the western way. The sun is in the darkness, its race is fairly run. But a great instant river still pauses, leaves slow on.

Youth hath the dawn of promise: manhood its stress and strain. Youth's buds burst from the zeniths and the dew of death to gain. But sun and death and twilight come when the day is done. And we at rest unmindful that the river flows on. —Miss Alice D. Baukage, in N. Y. Observer.

rescue her from a burning building, or be shipwrecked with her.

Jim evidently likes Gannon's opinion that she was a nice woman to know, and not being bound by the conventions of human society, he proceeded straightforward to show his approval. The Woman was startled when he suddenly held her gloved hand with his big fingers, but when her eyes met his she read a friendly intent in them, and gave him a reassuring pat.

"Why, he looks like Hester," she said to the girl with her.

The girl, who was thin, and didn't look strong, shrank away from Jim, and said: "Please don't. The brute might bite you."

The Woman laughed and walked on. Jim circled playfully around her as though of a mind to accompany her. A whistle from Gannon brought him to heel, and The Woman said with a smile: "I've had a mind to ask him if he would sell him. He's such a fine-looking creature."

"Why, Ellen! Speak to a strange man on the street? I'm shocked."

"All right, dear, I won't; but I'd like to own him."

"The man?" said the thin girl, who was very pale, was partially caused by her temper.

The Woman made no answer, and the two got in a handsome victoria drawn by a pair of nervous bay horses.

Gannon and Jim proceeded to Broadway and stopped to look at a tricyle bicyclist in bizarre raiment darting in and out among the vehicles and bearing an advertisement of a dentifrice.

"That fellow'll wind up by skeelin' some man's nose," said a countryman, passing on with his mind on The Woman. He and Jim were two blocks farther on when the sound of a runaway team's fast-flying hoofs striking the granite pavement came to his ears. Turning gamely, he said, "I wonder if they're heading down the street with a victoria swaying behind them. The coachman was doing his best, but the horses were beyond his control. As Gannon looked, he saw two ladies in the carriage. One was The Woman."

"Here, Jim!" called Gannon, dashing into the street. "Catch, boy! Stop 'em!"

Among the accomplishments that Gannon had drilled Jim in was throwing a bullock. He did it on a wager to humble the pride of a stocky countryman, who had a bestial dog that had ever dared a stoner. It was a pastime that Jim revelled in, and as soon as he saw the runaway horses and heard Gannon's cry, he knew what he had to do. Deploying in the path of the team, Jim with a mighty stroke, and his eyes glowering like fire. He let the horses get within 20 feet of him, then bounding forward to meet them sprung for the muzzle of the nearest. The white fangs sank into the delicate flesh of the horses' faces and with a weight of the entire plant was thrown downward and backward towards the bay's knees. The overcheck rein snapped, and the horse went down with Jim between his legs. The coachman was thrown forward and nearly broke the other horse's back. Gannon's dog of course did not mind the fall, and the horse was badly hurt, but held to the horse till he heard Gannon's voice ordering him to let go. Then he limped to his owner and wagged his tail feebly but proudly.

"Pshaw! You're a good dog, and a good master of a dog that stood those horses!"

Gannon told the stout old gentleman who had addressed him that he was.

"Want to thank you, sir, and the dog, too. I am Mr. Chesbrough—Nicholas Chesbrough, and those ladies whose horses are here are my daughter and my niece. What's your name?"

Gannon gave the stout old gentleman his name, and said he was happy to think that his dog had been of service, and hoped the ladies were not hurt.

"Not a particle; not a particle. Here you are."

Gannon was introduced to The Woman, and the thin girl, and Jim licked the hand of The Woman with undisguised affection.

"He acts as if he knew you," said Gannon.

"I do believe he is Hester," said The Woman. "I had a dog just like him, and he disappeared two years and eight months ago, just before we went to Europe."

"Jim, do you know this lady?" said Gannon.

"I started joyful."

"Possibly he is your dog. If he is—You mustn't say you'll give him up," interrupted The Woman. "But you'll bring him to see us, won't you?"

And Gannon did, not once, often, and now when The Woman goes for a stroll Jim walks with her.

Napping on the Bench.

By the decision in the Illinois appellate court that a judge may take a nap on the bench without invalidating the proceeding, a witty rejoinder of the late Senator Evarts is recalled. It was a case of the bench and stink, and the proposition was to remove all judges at the age of 70. Martin L. Townsend, of Troy, the combative champion of the bench and stink, told of having seen the venerable Chancellor Walworth asleep on the bench. "The honorable gentleman does not tell us," said Mr. Evarts in reply, "whether he was present as counsel or as a spectator on the occasion of the nap he had, and, accordingly, but it is well known to the members of the bar that the venerable chancellor never slept when anything was transpiring worthy of his attention."—N. ## HEART DISEASE.

Sudden Death of Former Governor Jno. R. Tanner.

Springfield, Ill., May 24.—Former Governor John R. Tanner died here suddenly in the Leland Hotel, at 2:45 yesterday afternoon, from rheumatism of the heart.

He had been confined to his room since his return from Chicago last Saturday, with rheumatism in the left side, but the case was not considered in the least serious. He felt much worse yesterday afternoon, and Dr. J. D. Dixon, the governor's physician, was called about 2:30 o'clock and found the governor dying.

Gov. Tanner had held various positions besides that of governor, having been a member of the Illinois house, United States marshal, Southern district of Illinois, state treasurer and assistant at the United States sub treasury at Chicago, and was for many years a member of the Republican state central committee and chairman of the same and was a candidate for the United States senator.

He leaves one son, Col. J. Mack Tanner, of Springfield, colonel Fourth Infantry, I. N. G., and one daughter, Mrs. John A. Barnes, of Chicago.

Gov. Tanner was fifty-seven years old and a private in the Fifteenth and Sixty-first Illinois infantry regiments, and a state senator, also former member of the railroad and warehouse commission.

A Very Remarkable Remedy.

"It is with a great deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer seeing the medicine exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore, and she became so enthusiastic that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever.' Sold by all druggists."

ETTRIDGE INDICTED.

Charged With Attempt to Assassinate Joe Ballard.

The Trigg county grand jury returned an indictment against William Ettridge for malicious shooting with intent to kill. The case is set for trial today. Ettridge is charged with attempting to assassinate Joe Ballard one evening last January. Ettridge was arrested on the 13th of Mr. J. R. Caudle, near Julien, a day or so after the shooting. T. S. Edwards, his attorney, said he had no defense.

TO FIGHT FOR LONG TERM.

McLaurin and Tillman Said to Have Reached an Agreement.

Columbia, S. C., May 25.—It is understood that Senator McLaurin and Senator Tillman have a tacit agreement to contest for the long term to which Tillman was elected last January. Under the State Democratic party rules, the candidates must designate specifically the office to which he aspires. Whether McLaurin wins over Tillman or Tillman is re-elected, McLaurin's unexpired term will be filled by a new man.

There are four announced candidates: Asbury C. Latimer, Congressman from the Third district, and said to be Tillman's lieutenant; D. S. Henderson, State Senator from Aiken; Col. George Johnstone, ex-Congressman from the Third district, and Wiley Jones, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee and executive officer of the South Carolina National Bank. Between Johnstone and Latimer there is no good feeling, and this race may be as interesting as it promised to be before the conditions were changed and McLaurin, as it were, put on the offensive. The Governor has the right to appoint regardless of party action, and an effort will be made to get him to appoint new men on the ground that Tillman and McLaurin have overstepped the bounds of propriety.

The State (newspaper) editorially will to-morrow call upon a third candidate to go into the race with Tillman and McLaurin, hoping that the two latter will be defeated.

Many farmers are finishing up their crop and others are about half done, while a few only set a small portion of their intended crop. In Hopkins, Webster and other counties North of
